I plucked a wrocus restermorn.
And placed it in a port's page—
A tiny prophet, newly born.
Within its snowy hermitage;
And all the hushed winter day.
It breathed its little life away.
And taked like a tone of thought—
But left the promise that it brought!

And where the withered crocus lies, Among the thy one my poet wore, Soft memories emparation A wang it does in good to love: A minute oder that will stay Whene'er I lift the flower away, A tittle pealanchely dower— Yet all the fortune of the flower!

Believe, the flower three enow and wind Fuffiled the promise that it brought; The poet passed and left behind Thuse hints of unperfected thought: The poet and the flower achieved. The fittle end for which they lived. For Beauty's sake, believe, content To die in its accomplishment.

The Weird Woman Assassin-A Murder Frustrated by an Extraordinary Dream. I was a close student at school, a young ambitious lad of sixteen, somewhat homespun, but strong in uprightness, and conscious of power. My dear father was sick, and undergoing that metempsychosis which the shallow thinkers call death. It was a storm of the same had followed. the shallow thinkers call death. It was a stormy day in January; the snow had fallen two feet deep, and I started for my home, eight miles distant. My father had written to me that he wanted to see me; he wanted to give me injunction not to forget my duties to him in the care of his wife—my mother. He need not have sent it; I could not, I never can, forget him or her. His desire to see me, growing out of a feeling that he might at any hour "pars onward," and to give counsel was natural, but not necessary. But his slightest wish was law to me; and I started for home, as I have eaid, on foot. Weary walk, this, trudging in an unbroken snow path. Before I reached the door, I thought my body would tire out completely; but it did not—I accomplished it.

I ate my supper, chatted awhile with my parents, and went to bed in my old bed-room. My father and my mother I left in the kitchen, gratified at my arrival and proud

I fell asleep, awoke, arose and dressed my-self, came into the kitchen, took a seat between my father and my mother. They looked surprised, and isquired why I had left my bed. Said I, "Has nobody been here since I went

"Well," replied I, " there will somebody come, and that is why I have left my bed—at least I have dreamed there would, and the dream is no illusion to me, but a fierce re-

My father smiled as if incredulous; yet as if he asked no braver or better defender than his boy. At this instant my mother, a very cautions woman, heard a rap at the door, and stepped to it, as I supposed, to inquire who was there, and what was wanted, but instead opened the door, and in came a terrible gast of wind and snow—for the night was hideous—and with them marched a woman.

She walked half-way from the door to the fire, when she discovered me, and I evidently took her aback by my presence. I saw the creature of my dream. I knew that I was destined to a struggle, and I grew in strength as I looked at my dear father and mother. She took a chair, turned her back to the fire and seated herself in the shadow. I kept my seat and appeared to give no attention to her.

"Who are you?" inquired my father.

"What's that to you?" said she.

"Every thing, if you are to stay in my house; nothing if you are not."

"What if I do not tell you?"

"Then you must leave my house."
"Leave the house!" exclaimed she; I should like to see any body here to try to put "What if I call my men, and throw you out neck and heels?"

strange occurrences, for he had received not less than $1,800 that very week, from large wheat sales, and he saw what was before wheat sates, and he saw what was before him. This hag was either a decoy or a man in disguise, whose object was robbery. I could see that all this was rapidly passing through my father's mind, but it did not bow him the ninth part of an incb. So I sat still. I suspected nothing but a war of words. The hag had an old quilted hood, and an old quilted cloak, which reached to her feet, and was belted about the waist. "You are a woman?" said father.

"You are a woman?" said father.
"Of course I am; what do you ask me that question for?" "Have you a husband?"

Where does he live?"

"Where does he live?"
"In Truxon."
"Well, then, if you have a husband, why do you not live at home, instead of gadding about on such a night as this, fit only for fiends to be alfoad?"
"Why, don't you set the North River on fire?" said she, leaping from her chair and springing toward my father, at the back side of my chair, and hissing through her teeth, "I'll teach you why I am here."
My mother sereamed and ran; my father made an ineffectual attempt to get out of the way, but instantly yielded, resolved to take

She recovered, and looking at me for a moment, said, as if in a sollloquy:

"Oh, you choose to cross my path do you? Well, see if I on 't settle you pretty quickly," and thrusting her hand into her cook, made a notion as if she would draw a dagger.

The motion maddened me, and it brought feam to my lips of I struck her half a dozen blows as quick as lightning. She let her dagger go, and cleached me, I her grip satisfied me that I thad found my match, aye, more, in strength, and that my skill as a boxer, and my most unparalleled ability as a wrestler, must save me. I had learned pugilism of a clever Eeglish teacher, and as to wrestling, to that day I had never been thrown down. I knew when I felt the grip that I was dealing with a man, but 'I felt that my father and mother were relying or me, and I grew stronger as I before said.

I struck him before he was balanced, staggered him, grappled him, my left hand into his throat, and struck him again, called on my mother to-open the door; and as she did so, pushed and kicked him out. He swore he would he the death of me. I teld him to take himself out of the State, or I would put the Sheriff on his track, and shutting the door in his free.

Now let your doubters tell me how I came Now let your doublers tell me how I came to see this matter beforehand—this hooded, clonked man. I had seen and heard his threats to my father, and truggled with him in my dream before he came to the house, and had awakened and left my bed, to go see to my father's safety, and again to compare him in the kichen. Financial Affairs. The Money market yesterday was irreguar, some Bankers mentioning quite an active and others a moderate demand; but generally, Currency was very scarce, and aumerous applications for Loans were rejected. None of the Discount-houses are extending favors of consequence to any one, and the disposition is to do no more than can be avoided. Eastern Exchange was rather firmer yeserday, but unchanged in rates, while Gold was steady; New Orleans Exchange was in light supply and very limited demand. Uncurrent Money was heavier, and, in some instances, lower, than for several days previous. Our quotations were as follows: Indiana Stock, 1/601; Pennsylvania (interior), 5; Virginia, Wheeling and Branches, 5; other solvent Virginia, 10; Missouri (except St. Louis City), 7; Iowa, 10; Wissouri (except St. Louis City), 7; Iowa, 10; Wissourin 10; Hilnois, 10; Maryland, (interior), 5; Tennessee, old Banks, 5; free Banks, 10@20; Michigan and Canada, 5; Alabama (Mobile), 10; Alabama (interior), 10@15; the Carolinas, 15@20; and Georgia, 5@10 discount.

Exchange and Coin were thus quoted at the close of the Bank hours yesterday:

Flour was unchanged yesterday. The receipts were light, and some 1,200 barrels sold at $4 25 to $4 50. Whisky was in fair demand and steady. Sugar was dull, Coffee drooped and Molasses lower. No special change occurred in Grains.

Provisions were unsettled in the afternoon. Nothing was done in Mess Pork or Bulk Meat. Lard declined, and Green Meats sold to some extent.

Hogs yesterday grew duller and duller as the day advanced, and at the close $5 to $5 25 were the prices offered, though $5 30 and $5 50 were paid during the day.

The following are the Imports and Exports during the twenty-four hours ending yesterday at noon:

day at noon:

/mports—Apples, 190 barrels; Barley, 948

The Hog market is firmer and prices are better, with sales of 1,000 head at 5c. net. Wednesday's New York papers thus refer to Tuesday's Stock market: The Message of the President of the United States was received and distributed in Wallstreet about two o'clock this afternoon. His views on disunion were variously construed—by some parties as wanting in force and directness, and thereby scarcely up to the emergency; and by others, on the other hand, as sufficiently firm and dignified for the present attitude of the question, and yet so indulgent and conciliatory toward South out neck and heels?"

"You have not got any men; they have all gone home."

"How do you know?"

I glanced at my father. He was pale, but his courage ebbed not a whit. He, helpless, not able to get out of his chair, surmised strange occurrences, for he had received not a wind the course of the question, and yet so indulgent and conciliatory toward South Carolina as probably to lead to further deaction of that State. oreaking up of the session, but closed irregular, and, as most of the Brokers quote it, with a heavy feeling. The stormy and disagreeable weather contributed some thing, no doubt, to the doubt and gloom which, in the imagination at least, of a good many of the operators, still rest upon the political agitation of the country. This feeling, however, was far from being general, the closing bid for New York Central, the barometer of the Share market, being 75 per cent, on any part of market, being 75 per cent. on any part of 2,000 shares, deliverable at the option of the seller in 30 days. Tucsday's New York Money market is mentioned in Wednesday's Times : The Money market to-day was rather more active at Bank. The offerings were larger at most of the Discount sessions held this morning, though made up in part of Paper of less pressing claim for accommo-dation than the earlier offerings under the late measure of expansion. The regular dealers, who confine their applications to their immediate wants, or to preparations for payments soon to mature, are generally accommodated, provided their securities are short and unquestionable. No promise is implied or attempt made under the present liberal arrangement between the Associated Banks to carry doubtful or second-class credit through the pressure. The terms of Discount outside of Bank continue high, 12@15 per cent. on the very best short Bills. The Exchange market for the Africa, to-morrow, winds up tame and rather unsatisfactory to drawers and sellers. The accounts from New Orleans continue had and the from New Orleans continue bad, and the Money and Exchange pressure there is reported to have reached something like a er sis to-day, calling for a general meeting of the Bankers to devise the means of relief. Here the rates on London closed at 104@ 05 for Banks and Bankers; 102@103 for
